feng shui

What is Feng Shui? Pronounced “fung schway”, literally translates as “Wind and Water”. Ancient philosophy states that success is largely determined by surroundings: whole lives can change when energy flow is altered by rearranging ones physical environment, ie. furniture, sounds or colors. It is using all our collective knowledge and resources to create the most comfortable and supportive living and working spaces.

Feng Shui is in everything - really it is the flow of energy and our interaction with it. From our local communities, work places and our homes, it is about interpreting how this energy is moving or affecting us - seeing what has happened to this point and then making necessary changes to create a more effective flow with a greater intention.

Every culture has used Feng Shui in some form or another, from animals and the way they build they homes in the wilderness to our own civilization and how we bring balance into our home and family environments.

We have become so busy in our fast-paced lives that balance and harmony seem to elude us. You can see this by the modern buildings we live in that many front entrance ways are placed at odd angles, more for “architectural design” than an inviting entrance. Balance and proper flow of energy are not achieved with such odd angles and will therefore create confusion as we walk through them. Next time you drive down your street, notice which front doors feel inviting and those that don’t.

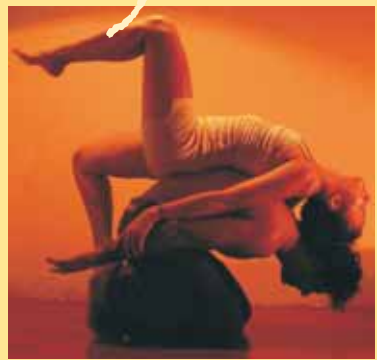

Whether you are in the planning stages of building or buying a new home, or want to balance your current home or business and create success and prosperity, a Feng Shui consultation would be just the thing you need. Contact Crystal Phillips for more information toll free at 1-866-526-0991.

Natural salt is one the greatest gifts that the Earth has given her children. We take for granted its simplicity - yet, like water and air we cannot live without it. Creating a natural balance, Natural Salts are a necessary balance for our bodies internally and externally. The cleansing properties of salt make it one of the most precious elements, unlike diamonds or gold, salt is intrinsically valuable. Concentrations of rich minerals and other trace elements act as a catalyst to speed biological healing and regeneration. Active trace elements are easily absorbed through the skin during bathing and pass quickly throughout the body's circulatory system.
